

Other

Several important projects in the Ceramics Division are unique and are not constituent parts of “Programs.” These projects are highly visible and have significant broad impact in several application areas but generally involve a commitment of personnel and resources less than that considered to be a program. The Ceramics Division relies on these projects for enhanced technology transfer and for more effective delivery of the results of the research programs to the technical community.